Summary

Este perfil de país contiene un análisis de causas de la deforestación y la degradación forestal en el Perú, y el contexto económico, institucional y político en el cual está emergiendo REDD + en el Perú. El Perú cuenta con una superficie total de bosques de aproximadamente 73 millones de hectáreas, o casi 60% del territorio nacional. En los últimos años, la deforestación se bajó de 150 000 ha/año a 106 000 ha/año pero todavía representa una de las fuentes mayores de emisiones de gases de efecto invernadero en el país. En el proceso de preparación para REDD+, el país ha avanzado con los procesos de salvaguardar la participación de la sociedad civil y protección de los derechos de las comunidades nativas y locales. Al mismo tiempo, los retos de debilidades de gobernanza al nivel nacional y regional, y conflictos de interés son amenazas para una implementación efectiva, eficiente, y equitativa al largo plazo.
